Art Unit: 1746

1. The abstract is objected for a minor informality in that it refers to " A method", however only apparatus claims have been presented. It requested that the same be corrected in order to be commensurate with the claimed scope of the invention.
2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kenjo et al. (U. S. Pat. No. 6,247,339) in view of Fukuzawa et al. (U. S. Pat. No. 4,791,691).

Re claim 1, Kenjo is cited disclosing a washing machine, comprising: an outer tub configured to store washing water; an inner tub rotatably mounted in the outer tub; a pulsator (38, see fig. 9) configured to form a water circulation for washing laundry; and a motor installed under the outer tub and configured to rotate the inner tub and the pulsator, wherein the motor is configured to vary a rotation speed of the inner tub (see abstract) and the pulsator, such that the laundry is washed by a combination of modes as follows: a centrifugal force washing mode, wherein the motor rotates the inner tub and the pulsator in the same direction for a first predetermined period of time, thereby creating a centrifugal force that is varied according to a variation of the rotation speed, which pushes the laundry against a wall of the inner tub; and an agitation washing mode, wherein the motor rotates the inner tub and the pulsator in the same direction at an identical speed that differs from the claim only in the recitation of second reverse direction with the second period of time. Fukuzawa is cited disclosing the arrangement of providing a drum and pulsator rotating together with a second reverse direction and second time period (see col. 6, line 32 thru col. 8, line). It therefore would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to modify the device of Kenjo, to have the second reverse direction as taught by Fukuzawa, for the purpose of ensuring that the entire surface area of the clothes is contacted with washing liquid. Re claim 2, Kenjo discloses the first speed being sufficient to force the water to flow to the outer tub as claimed. Re claims 3 and 4, Kenjo, as proposedly modified discloses the second direction as claimed, which inherently removes the laundry from the wall of the inner tub. Re claim 5, no patentable distinction is deemed to exist between the motor as claimed and the motor as taught by either Kenjo or Fukuzawa. The same are considered to be the functional equivalence of each other. This is also applicable to the subject matter of claims 6 and 7. Claims directed to apparatus must be distinguished from the prior art in terms of structure rather than function. In re Danly, 263 F.2d 844, 847, 120 USPQ 528, 531 (CCPA 1959). “[A]pparatus claims cover what a device is, not what a device does.” Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Bausch & Lomb Inc., 909 F.2d 1464, 1469, 15 USPQ2d 1525, 1528 (Fed. Cir. 1990). (emphasis in original).

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. In Hwang, Clark, Reedig, Brimer, Im and Kim, note the washing means.
